REPORT THOUSANDS DIE IN CHINESE COLD WAVE

LONDON, Jan. 11.—Central China continued today in the grip of a record cold wave which already has taken a toll of thousands of lives, according to a dispatch from Peking received by the Daily Express.

The cold wave and accompanying snow storms, the worst in over half a century, took their heaviest toll in the provinces of Shansi and Honan.

In Peking, 208 beggars died in the streets from the cold. These unfortunates, weakened by continued undernourishment, perished from lack of shelter against the elements.

During the severe snowstorms in Honan, 700 Nationalist troops were frozen to death and their bodies sent back to Hankow by train.

At Hankow, hundreds of families living aboard junks were either frozen to death or drowned when ice jams caused their craft to sink. Five hundred junks were sunk in an ice-jam on the Han River with a resultant heavy loss of life.

KEATONS HAVE FIRE

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Jan. 11.—A fire said to have been caused by defective wiring early today disturbed the slumbers of the Buster Keaton family at their home. The blaze damaged only the living and dining rooms before it was extinguished by a servant. Damage was estimated at $1,000.

BRITISH PROPOSAL TO REDUCE CRUISER STRENGTH LEARNED

Delegates Pleased To Hear Concession By Admiralty

By GEORGE R. HOLMES
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

ABOARD S. S. GEORGE WASH,INGTON, AT SEA, Jan. 11.—The announcement by H. V. Alexander, First Lord of the Admiralty, that Great Britain was prepared to reduce her cruiser requirements from the minimum of seventy she demanded at the Geneva naval conference of 1926 to a minimum of fifty, was received with general satisfaction today by the American delegates now journeying to the London naval arms conference.

The delegates indicated that they regarded the admiralty chief's announcement as a seal of approval from the British admiralty which has the effect of clinching the disarmament agreement reached by President Hoover and Premier MacDonald in their informal conferences.

Secretary of State Stimson, head of the American delegation, declined to make any direct comment regarding Alexander's announcement. He merely smiled, pending official information regarding the announcement.

Of course, the size of these fifty cruisers which Great Britain will demand at the forthcoming conference is a matter of vital importance which will have to be considered.

Although the cut in naval armaments proposed by the admiralty head is drastic when compared with Great Britain's former demands, it still leaves Britain with a slight superiority in gross tonnage. To offset this advantage, the United States will have to be allowed to build more than ten thousand ton cruisers.

No difficulty is anticipated in bringing about this adjustment in the interests of parity, the delegates indicated. President Hoover and Premier MacDonald arrived at a basis for making this adjustment when they met last October, it is believed.

The news that France definitely refused to agree to naval parity with Italy was not commented upon either by Secretary Stimson or the other four delegates. All crept into a shell of reticence masked by evasion of the report had been received from informed sources.

It appeared, however, to occasion no surprise, probably having been anticipated by the delegates through previous information from ambassador to France, Walter E. Edge, on the French position.

The George Washington's engines are pushing the vessel seaward at its highest speed. Secretary Stimson and his colleagues, Ambassador to Mexico, Dwight W. Morrow and Senators Robinson and Reed, are anxious to reach Plymouth, England as early as possible Friday morning.

GRAIN ELEVATOR AT CLEVELAND BURNED WITH SERIOUS LOSS

Estimate Damage At Million; Building Bought By County

CLEVELAND, Jan. 11.—After raging for nearly nine hours, a volcanic fire which leveled the grain elevator of the Cleveland Grain Co., located in the flats here and valued with its contents at nearly $1,000,000, was slowly brought under control here early today.

Firefighters from every available fire company in the city and two fire tugs combined forces in pouring thousands of tons of water against the sheets of flame that crumpled the structure as if it was tissue paper.

The fire broke out in the building shortly after nine o'clock last night. Its origin could not be exactly determined early this morning, but it is believed to have started in the drying room on the fourth floor of a six-story wing of the ten-story building.

The building, valued itself at $450,000, was purchased by the county yesterday as a site for a part of the right-of-way for the proposed Lorain-Central bridge. There was approximately $500,000 worth of grain stored in the elevator, according to officials of the company.

The fire was discovered last night by one of the watchmen at the elevator. He said he noticed smoke pouring out of the drying room on the fourth floor. The watchman rushed out to turn in a fire alarm and when he returned he found the building belching with smoke. Within a few minutes the blaze gained volcanic proportions.

Flames shot more than 100 feet into the air, turning the blazing building into one of the most spectacular fires seen here in years.

Firefighters from twenty-nine companies and two fire tugs answered the three-alarm and special alarm calls that were sent in within a half hour after the first company arrived on the scene.

OHIO EMERGES FROM EFFECTS OF STORMS AND FLOOD THREATS

SIXTY PLANES JOIN HUNT FOR TWO ARMEN

Flyers Missing Since Going Aloft For Altitude Test

NEW YORK, Jan. 11.—More than sixty airplanes prepared to take off from fields in the metropolitan area today to search for two airmen who climbed yesterday for an altitude test and disappeared.

The searchers, who will leave from Roosevelt Field, Hempstead Harbor, and Teterboro Airport, will constitute the largest group to set out from here on such a mission.

Daniel Marra, 24, a pilot and William Kirkpatrick, observer, are the missing men.

They took off yesterday morning from the Farmingdale (L. I.) field of the Fairchild aviation corporation on an altitude test flight.

Mists were rolling as they climbed and a strong north-west wind drew the clouds over the field to hide them from view. The sound of their engines died away as they apparently climbed higher.

Anxiety for the plane was felt when six hours elapsed—in that time their fuel supply should have been exhausted.

Unestimated Damage Is Blamed On Sleet Following Rain

By I. N. S.

Cities, towns, and villages in Ohio were desperately attempting to restore normalcy today following one of the most severe sleet storms and freeze-ups in the history of the state's weather annals.

High waters, ripped communication systems, and paralyzed traffic conditions caused unestimated losses throughout the state in winter's most recent havoc.

Shelby, Bucyrus, and Ashland, stung by the merciless lashing of the sleet storm were cracking through their ice encasements today in an effort to restore contact with the outside world. These districts were isolated all day yesterday and early today after the storm had cut down their telephone and telegraph systems and left them stranded in a sea of ice.

Scores of cities in the state were forced to resort to candles and gas mantles for light after their electric light power had been cut off by the ravages of the storm.

Crestline and Hamilton were still suffering from the ill effects of the storm today. At Hamilton yesterday seventy-five families were forced to flee from their homes when the Big Miami River swelled to a sixteen-foot level.

Storm damages in excess of $100,000 were felt in Crestline which was still isolated from communication with the outside world today. This district is not expected to have either power or telephone service until Monday. All manufacturing plants there have been forced to close down and fire department and street cleaning forces are chopping through layers of ice to open up streets which were blocked with ice-coated trees felled by the storm.

Numerous accidents were reported over the entire state as a result of ice-sheathed highways, streets and sidewalks. One fatality was reported in Cleveland when Raelly Mills, 65, was killed as the automobile in which he was riding skidded and crashed into a trolley car.

The lives of approximately a score of school children were endangered yesterday when the school bus in which they were riding skidded and cracked off a wheel. Outside of a severe shake-up none of the children was injured.

POPE REAFFIRMS EDUCATION RIGHTS

VATICAN CITY, Jan. 11.—Pope Pius XI today issued an encyclical reaffirming the rights of the Catholic church in regard to education as distinct from the rights of the state.

The question of education of children has always been one of the differences marring the harmonious relations between the church and state.

Recently the pope criticized Premier Mussolini for permitting mass athletic demonstrations in which girls and young women took part. His holiness maintained that it was improper for girls to partake in such spectacles as part of their education.

Since the breach between the church and the state which was healed by the later treaty last year, education of the young has been a state affair.

She was found at Spruce, Mich.

GERMAN DELEGATES CONCEDE TO FRENCH OVER REPARATIONS

Agree To Payment In Middle Of Month At Hague Meet

LONDON, Jan. 11.—Definite progress toward settlement of the vexed reparations problems was reached today when the German delegates at the Hague conference yielded to the French demands that reparations payments be made at the fifteenth of the month, it was stated in an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from the scene of the parley.

Previously, the Germans had held out for payment at the end of the month, which would have made a difference of 80,000,000 gold marks over the thirty-six year period of reparations payments under the Young plan.

The French granted the Germans one concession in agreeing that railway reparations be paid at the end of the month, but all other payments will be made on the fifteenth.

This agreement followed a heated interchange between the German and former allied delegates, in the course of which Philip Snowden, chief British delegate, indirectly accused the Germans of trying to torpedo the Young plan.

"If you want to return to the Dawos plan," the British Chancellor of the exchequer said with asperity, "just say so plainly."

DIAGNOSE DEATH IN TOLEDO AS STRANGE DISEASE; MORE ILL

Two Dead And Eleven Sick Blamed On Tropical Illness

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

Health authorities in various cities took precautions today to combat the spread of a rare tropical disease known as psittachosis, or "parrot fever."

Two deaths — Mrs. Louise Schaeffer in Baltimore and Mrs. Percy C. Williams in Toledo — have been recorded. A score of others are ill of the disease in this country.

Three persons are stricken in Annapolis, Md., and while their condition was serious today they were responding to treatment. At Warren, Ohio, three persons were quarantined following the death of Mrs. Williams. Those under quarantine at Warren are Mr. and Mrs. W. W. McEntire and their daughter. The husband of Mrs. Williams, who died in a Toledo hospital, is seriously ill of the disease.

The disease is new in this country and while it has not reached the proportions of an epidemic it is causing health authorities concern.

Several deaths have been reported in Germany. Attention was drawn to "parrot fever" by a recent outbreak in Argentina. A parrot, playing a role in a theatrical production, was fondled by players, and several of them contracted the disease. The parrot died.

With two deaths and the serious illness of eleven other persons, two separate localities of the United States Ohio and Maryland, are today taking precautions against the spread of the comparatively rare and frequently fatal disease, psittachosis, or "parrot fever."

The death of Mrs. Percy C. Williams in a Toledo, Ohio, hospital this week, to day had been diagnosed as "parrot fever." Her husband is seriously ill with the same disease. Both were stricken with a malady after a parrot had died in their home.

Three members of one family at Warren, Ohio, are seriously ill because of the disease. Their house is under quarantine. They are Mr. and Mrs. W. W. McEntire and a daughter Miss Clody McEntire.

At Baltimore, Md., Mrs. Louise Schaeffer died yesterday and an autopsy which was performed on her body revealed that she had died from psittachosis. Seven other cases have been reported in that state. Four are employees of a pet shop and the others are members of an Annapolis family.

In all cases, the victims showed the same symptoms, which are familiar with those of typhoid fever, pneumonia and influenza. The stricken persons experience high fever and nausea.

It is believed to be communicated to persons from parrots. In nearly all instances, according to available statistics, the parrots, family pets, die before the persons are stricken. Such was the case with both of the Ohio families, who were hit by the disease.

The parrot's feathers stand on end after the bird dies of that disease, it is said.

No definition is found in medical dictionaries for the word psittachosis. Scholars say that it is derived from the Greek language and means "resembling a parrot."

GETS MILLION DOLLARS

Rosenwald Settles Fortune On Bride In Lieu Of Dower Interest In Estate

CHICAGO, Jan. 11.—Julius Rosenwald, multi-millionaire philanthropist, effected a pre-nuptial agreement with his bride, the former Mrs. Adelaide Goodkind, giving her $1,000,000 in lieu of all rights to the Rosenwald estate, it was disclosed here today.

Rosenwald and his bride left aboard the Saturnia for a honeymoon cruise to Italy and Egypt following their marriage Wednesday in the home of the philanthropist's son, Lessing.

Mrs. Rosenwald, the widow of the late Benjamin L. Goodkind, wealthy pioneer merchant of St. Paul, Minn., possesses a fortune in her own name, it is understood, and the agreement was entered into merely as the usual legal form where such large estates are involved.

In the agreement, drawn up by Chicago attorneys, his wife is to receive $1,000,000 in securities, waiving her dower rights, and in return Rosenwald is to waive all dower rights to his bride's estate.

Although regarded as one of the wealthiest men in the United States, the exact size of Rosenwald's fortune has never been revealed officially.

COMMISSION TAKES ACTION TO PREVENT ACCIDENTS IN OHIO

Will Give Officials Hearing; May Revoke Licenses

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 11.—Steps, which will undoubtedly terminate in stricter enforcement of bus regulations in Ohio and which will serve as a warning to transportation companies, had been taken by the state utilities commission here today.

Members of the commission have cited officials of three bus companies, whose motor cruisers recently figured in highway accidents, to appear before them January 20, "to show cause why their bus certificates should not be revoked."

Those cited were the Greyhound Lines, Inc., the Interstate Highway Lines, Inc., and the Xenia Bus Lines, Inc. A bus of the Greyhound Lines skidded from the National Highway near Eaton, January 2, and two persons were killed and thirteen others were injured. A "Jack Rabbit" bus of the Interstate line collided with a truck near Bellevue the same day and ten persons suffered injuries. Four of them were seriously hurt. The Xenia line was cited because of an accident near Attica, December 31, when one of their busses crashed into a school bus. None was seriously hurt in the latter accident.

If the school bus which was hit by a Pennsylvania flyer at Shreve, where seven young boys were killed and nine others were hurt, had been owned by a bus company, the owners would probably have been cited. It was privately owned, however, and in its report of the tragedy, the commission fixed the responsibility of the crash on the driver, although recommending that additional safety devices be placed at the crossing.

According to investigators of the Eaton accident, the Greyhound Pittsburgh-St. Louis bus was being driven at a rate of fifty miles an hour. Two passengers of the bus gave this estimate of speed. One of them was an automobile salesman and the other an employee of the Cincinnati Street Railway Company. Both witnesses are good judges of speed it was explained. The speedometer on the bus was not working at the time of the crash, the report declared.

In the report of the Bellevue crash, it was declared that the Jack Rabbit bus was overloaded.

The citing of these three companies is regarded as the first steps in the stricter enforcement of bus regulations by the state utilities commission.

REDUCTION IN FARE FOR AIR PASSENGER SERVICE REVEALED

T. A. T. Makes Cut From Twelve To Five Cents A Mile

NEW YORK, Jan. 11.—A reduction in passenger fare rates from twelve cents a mile to five cents a mile, the most drastic cut in the history of trans-continental air travel rates, has been announced by the Transcontinental Air Transport-Maddux Air Lines, the company which in conjunction with the Pennsylvania and Santa Fe railroads operates a forty-eight hour service between New York and Los Angeles.

The rate which brings the cost of a trip across the continent by plane and train to less than that for the same journey by extra-fast trains, with Pullman, will go into effect Jan. 14, according to C. M. Keys, president of the line.

The reduction was recommended by Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh in a long-distance conversation with Keys, yesterday. Lindbergh is on the Pacific coast on an inspection tour of the line.

The rate is applicable to any part of the trip as well as to the entire journey, from New York to Los Angeles the price of a ticket will be $152.92, a reduction of $107.51.

SENTENCED TO PEN FOR EMBEZZLEMENT

WEST UNION, O., Jan. 11.—Frank R. Carroll, former Adams County highway superintendent, is today under sentence to serve from two to five years in the Ohio State Penitentiary in connection with his alleged actions in embezzling $5,875 of the state highway department funds.

Carroll was returned from Los Angeles after he had fled there when the charges here were filed. The man pleaded guilty.

It is alleged that he "padded" the highway department payroll, placing the names of his wife and father-in-law on it.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

THE PROOF OF LOVE—Jesus answered and said unto him, If a man love me, he will keep my words; and my Father will love him, and we will come unto him, and make our abode with him. He that loveth me not keepeth not my sayings; and the word which ye hear is not mine, but the Father's which sent me.—John 14:23, 24.

CHILD TRAINING

That the child's training begins at home, is not a new thought nor is it one which has ever been disputed to any great extent.

This thought is revived as we read an article in the Farm Journal claiming that "like charity, good manners begin at home." They should begin with your child's parents and anyone with two sets of manners, one for home folks and one for strangers will come to grief sooner or later, for he is bound to be caught off guard sometime.

Rather a true statement, we believe.

The child accustomed to courtesy between his parents and between his parents and himself begins at home his social training with his first breath, as he should. Growing up, he absorbs it with the other good things of home daily. He will acquire early the poise given by the accustomed, and have instinctive knowledge of just the right thing to do, always. And never will he know that uneasy self-consciousness that can leave one stranded under many social circumstances in life, unless one is securely bulwarked by courteous habits.

No amount of later-life-acquired veneer will give your grown child this fearless, easy command of himself. Neither will it save him from those terrible embarrassed moments when he uncertainly does social "dents," not because he doesn't know better by then, perhaps, but because the veneer peeled off at some crucial moment and left him exposed raw, a semi-savage whose politeness wasn't real because not a lifelong habit.

CANADA IN 1930

The economic history of Canada during 1929, as analyzed by Mr. Edward W. Beatty, chairman and president of the Canadian Pacific railway, whose reputation for sound judgment and conservative statement is as well established in this country as it is in the dominion, was "nine months of progressive development and three of hesitancy." A partial crop failure in the great grain growing provinces on the prairies; a dispute between Canadian sellers and European wheat buyers over the price to be paid for Canada's exportable surplus, and the sudden deflation of the stock market accounted for the slowing up of business during the last quarter of the year. All three of these factors were superficial.

As for the future, says Mr. Beatty:

"The development of our national resources and the broad diversification of our industries have received no serious check. The increasingly productive exploitation of our new mineral areas goes forward without interruption, and I have so far heard of no falling off in the interest displayed by the older parts of Canada toward these new northwestern regions, which I believe will in a very few years make most important contributions to the wealth and power of this country. I see no evidence to support suspicion that men at the head of our industrial or financial institutions have lost any of their faith in the future of this country, nor are they likely to show any less courage in the future than they have in the past, when, during the coming year they set their hands to the task of strengthening and extending the country's economic fabric each working in his own way and along the lines of his own business."

Bo-Broadway

By JOSEPH VAN RAALTE

NEW YORK. — Jay Gould, the actor who married into the Johns Manville asbestos family (not dam!) recently, has changed his name to the amusement of Mazza Lane, which still keeps track of him, though just now he is not acting outside social circles. He hung on to the Gould part of it, but swapped the Jay for Clarence. This has a noble moniker been cleared of aspersions.

THE OLD LURE

Flo Lewis, Gould's former wife before his current fireproof alliance, is still a highly paid "single" in vaudeville, varying the monotony by appearing now and then in a musical comedy or revue. There are several youngsters by her marriage with Gould, who are growing up with perfectly natural interest in the theatre. Flo doesn't take kindly to the kids' predilection for the aproned stage.

CHILD OF STAGE

Max Hoffman, Jr., appearing in "Sweet Adeline," is one of the few young men of the stage who literally was dragged up on Broadway. He is the son of Gertrude Hoffman, the dancer. His Paw is Max Hoffman, orchestra leader. Max first saw the light of day on "the road" when his mother and father were playing in Norfolk, Va.; but most of his youth was spent in the old brownstone house which occupied the present site of Keith's Palace theatre. It was famous in its day as "the last house on Broadway."

Max made his debut dancing with his Maw. That was in Cleveland. The manager of the theatre, unaware of the relationship, said to Max Sr.: "Your wife was exquisite to-night; but that partner of hers is the worst I have ever seen."

Max Jr. learned rapidly, however, and in Chicago, only a few weeks after his Cleveland debut, "stopped" his mother's sham.

THE WAY of the WORLD

By GROVE PATTERSON

HONEST STUDENTS

The Harmon Foundation which lends money to needy college students finds that ambitious young men who want to go to college are good risks. After extending credits to the amount of more than half a million dollars the losses in collection are less than two per cent. Advancing funds to college students can be called an investment instead of a philanthropy. Without honesty a college education would be somewhat worse than nothing. Happy are these boys who realize what it means all through life to have a reputation for paying one's debts.

NOT SHREWD

William Lyon Phelps, brilliant Yale professor, says the founder of the Christian religion was a spiritual revolutionist who had no sympathy with the shrewd and canny people of the earth. There is such a thing as divine folly, says Prof. Phelps, and it consists not of looking out all the time for one's self and one's own interests, but in giving freely of one's own personality. Real religion cares nothing for neatly balanced accounts of virtue and reward. It expects us to give more than we have given to us.

The men who are not forgotten, for whom we build monuments, are not usually the "shrewd and canny" ones of earth.

EXPECTING LITTLE

We are told by optimists we ought to expect much if we are to have much. Expecting big things means winning big things, they say. Some wisdom in this philosophy, but it hardly applies to all things. For example, one makes a mistake to expect gratitude. Gratitude is rare and we are not likely to find much of it in daily experience. If we let ourselves continue in the habit of expecting to find it we are likely to be disappointed and to become discouraged, bitter. Do not expect gratitude. If on occasion you find it, it will make you happy.

INVENTIONS TO COME

Like the man who wanted to close the patent office back in 1840 because he believed all possible inventions had been made, there are many today who fail to visualize the possibilities of developing industrial civilization. And right now the world is in need of a new metal. Industry needs a metal as hard as the best steel, as rustless as gold, and as light as aluminum. It can be produced and probably will be.

Already in the rich field of aviation we find experiments with self-righting and self-regulating airplanes. The fool-proof plane is near. Soon, perhaps, somebody will invent infallible courtesy and infallible brains for automobile drivers.

COST OF AIR MAIL SERVICE DISCUSSED

By WARREN IRVING GLOVER
Second Assistant Postmaster General

W. Irving Glover was born in Brooklyn, N. Y., Oct. 2, 1879. He was educated in the public schools. As a boy he worked for James Talcott, commission merchant, in New York, and continued as a distributor in the woolen trade until 1906. After organizing a real estate holding company and acting as officer of several other companies, he was elected to the New Jersey assembly in 1916, where he remained until 1921, serving as speaker in 1920. In 1921 he was made third assistant postmaster general and has been second assistant since 1925.

The airmail service is no longer in its pioneering stage. In the 11 years since the post-office department inaugurated an experimental route between New York and Washington, developments in the service have come thick and fast. The encouragement given the government to this method of transportation of mail has resulted in a daily service being provided for most of our large cities throughout the country.

During the year 1929, the greatest strides were made by the postoffice department in extending the airmail service to Central and South America. Within a comparatively short time Central and South America will be entirely covered by airmail routes, operated by American companies.

For the year just closed, there were 12,295 miles covered by airmail in Mexico, Central and South America. The routes inaugurated during the year were those from Miami to Havana, Miami to Cristobal and Paramaribo, Cristobal to Curacao, Port of Spain to Paramaribo, Miami to San Juan and Port of Spain, Miami to Nassau, Brownsville to Mexico City and Guatemala City and the route from Cristobal to Santiago, Buenos Aires and Montevideo.

But the operation of the airmail service is expensive, the rate being 150 per cent higher than the ordinary first class postal rate. It cost the department $8.81 a pound to transport airmail from Boston to Los Angeles. It receives but 80 cents a pound for this mail. The government's loss, therefore, is $8.01 a pound.

It is imperative that there must be a readjustment in the rates now paid by the government to airmail contractors. This problem is now being worked out by the officials in charge.

It is estimated that 85 per cent of matter now carried by airmail does

How To Achieve Beauty

By MME HELENA RUBINSTEIN

NO rules for beauty would be complete without a word or two on rest and relaxation, so I am going to write to you on this subject today. In making up your beauty schedule for the week, this budgeting of beauty time, in which you are going to show yourself so very efficient, please set aside a few moments for doing nothing but rest. Never let anyone convince you that the time you spend in doing this is wasted if you are really resting—and need to. There are in-between moments which you can set aside for this purpose, just as there are for your other beauty cares.

Not long ago a charming Frenchwoman came to me in Paris. She seemed very distraught, and paced up and down in a perfect fit of nerves until I was ready to give my attention to her. Then, and not until then, did she relax, and as I spoke to her she explained that she had not been able to rest for days. She had been rushing from one social engagement to another in a desperate fever of excitement, looking forward all the while to an hour with me when she would be able to relax.

After I told her how foolish such expenditure of energy was, she lay back in her chair, completely calm and quiet, every nerve and muscle in her body, as she said, resting.

Then I explained to her how she could have relaxed in this same way many times a day—had she chosen to—while in her room, going from one place to another, or before dressing for dinner in the evening. It is merely a matter of habit and training—remembering to relax whenever one has a private, leisure moment. But the good it does you is well worth the effort of remembering.

Before dinner in the evening is the time when most business women can take a few minutes to relax. I go down on my bed before dressing, or simply "flop" in your boudoir chair—let every nerve and muscle feel released of strain. Sag limply, and let your mind go blank. Then freshen yourself by a quick beauty treatment for dinner and the evening.

If you are a young mother you may find the mid-afternoon nap a wise habit to form, even if only for ten short minutes. When the children are napping or playing, you can steal a few moments of relaxation, too.

Behind the Scenes In Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON.—Rudyard Kipling had a big influence in sticking the United States with the Philippines.

The Spanish-American war occurred just about the time the Briton's stories of his countrymen's activities in India were at the height of their popularity—good yarns, but full of imperialism. Anglo-Saxon superiority to everything else under the sun, the fun of colonial rule and oodles of additional picturesque hokum that we were in precisely the right frame of mind at the moment to try out for ourselves.

The Filipinos were an ideal inferior race for us to boss, we had plenty of "younger sons" who were aching for some place "overseas" to swank around in, like the Kipling boys, and we fell for the opening same as a thousand of bricks.

Of course the game palled after awhile, but by then a lot of American business interests had horned in at Manila and vicinity, and they refused to let us crawfish out.

They kept reminding us of our responsibilities—meaning their investments.

And it is, for a fact, difficult to pull down the flag.

Besides, even yet the islands are convenient as a place to provide for a "good party man" as governor general—and get him out of the way at home.

However, the original pep of the thing has all gone out of it.

We know the Philippines today as just what they are and always have been—an infernal pest and danger and expense to us.

They are a pest because they have the poor taste to prefer independence even to the prosperity we have given to them. Such a silly preference no doubt proves conclusively that they are "unfit for self-government," but they are continually yowling about it, nevertheless.

As for an expense—no one disputes that we have put ten times the money into them that we ever have taken out. A few individuals have taken some out—for themselves. But Americans, as a people, have blown millions on them without getting a cent's worth of anything in return—and quite the reverse of thanks from the Filipinos themselves.

And a danger! There they have lain all these years, 7,000 miles away from us, but only a dozen hours' steaming from battleships and transports from the southern end of Japan's island of Formosa—a standing invitation to the mikado to grab them any day, and plunge us into a war at sea, that might last a decade and cost us billions, for a stake that we ought to be grateful for a chance to pay him to take off our hands.

Ever since 1898 what has been the great obstacle to any reduction in the size of our navy?

Why, the Philippines, to be sure.

Who would have expected our selfish American sugar interests to raise a squawk in favor of Philippine independence?—at this late day.

A fat lot they care about Philippine independence!—"per se."

All they want is a higher sugar

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

By MRS. MARY MORTON

Menu Hint
Sausage with Fried Apples
Baked Potatoes
Buttered Lima Beans
Cabbage and Pimiento Salad
Griddle Cakes
Money

The cabbage salad may be served with either French dressing or mayonnaise. If you do not use the cornmeal recipe for the pancakes, use whole wheat flour or graham flour in your batter.

Today's Recipes
Sausage with Fried Apples—The sausages may be baked in the oven with the potatoes, or cooked in a heavy frying pan on top of the stove. Be sure they are tightly covered, prick each one with fork, and then they will not burst. The sliced apples should be added when the sausages are partly cooked. They should not be overdone. Sweet potatoes take a shorter time to cook than white potatoes, so you may prefer to have them if you are in a hurry.

Coffee Recipe Suggestions
Coffee Jelly
Two tablespoons granulated gelatine, one-half cup cold water, one-third cup sugar, three cups hot coffee. Soak gelatine in cold water until dissolved. Add hot coffee and sugar and stir until sugar is melted. Pour into mold and chill until set. Serve with whipped cream.

Coffee Cream Filling
One-half cup sugar, two tablespoons cornstarch, one-eighth teaspoon salt, two eggs, two tablespoons ground coffee, one cup scalded milk, one teaspoon butter, one-half teaspoon vanilla extract. Scald coffee and milk. Mix sugar, cornstarch, salt and beaten eggs. Strain milk and stir in gradually to other mixture. Add butter, cook in double boiler until thick and smooth, stirring constantly. Add vanilla and cool.

tariff—so as to soak us harder for sweetening for our coffee.

The trouble is:

How are they going to keep home sugar out?—no matter how high the tariff—while the Philippines remain an American dependency—and consequently entitled to their products' free entry into the United States.

True, the sugar folk did propose a tariff wall against the islands, regardless of their dependent status; but that was a trifle too raw—nearly everyone gagged at the idea of hanging onto them as dependents and yet denying them tariff equality.

The upshot is that our domestic sugar barons have developed into about the best Philippine independence boosters that we have here in Washington.

Indeed, even though the sugar tariff increase fails to go through, as is beginning to look pretty dubious now, the prospects are mid-dling good that the Philippine independence campaign will forge ahead to victory.

It always has had some faithful pluggers in its favor in congress.

The sugar interests also are committed to it, whether they get their tariff advance or not. A responsive chord has been struck in the bosoms of the vegetable oil and tobacco interests, too.

We have lost our enthusiasm for our "little brown brothers" and the "white man's burden" anyway.

Nature's Functions

Nature had to design certain functions that keep us alive—the beating of the heart, the respiration, peristalsis (automatic movements of the intestines)—to carry on without any direction on our part. And when we concentrate on them, she is very apt to protest.

Take this matter of the heart beating, for instance. Apparently it is not abnormal for the heart to have an extra beat, occasionally to miss a beat, but if you become frightened, and concentrate on it, you can cause it to cut up all sorts of capers—speed up, slow down, beat irregularly, etc.—so that you begin to think you have some fatal organic heart disease. These organs that work without conscious thought are controlled by the sympathetic nervous system, and when fear creeps in, then this nervous system is stimulated, affecting all of the organs under its control.

Recently, at the New York Academy of Medicine, I heard a most interesting paper given by Dr. Lewis A. Connor, on the "Psychic Factor in Cardiac Disorders." He told of the following patients: Case 1. An apparently healthy man, in the course of a periodic examination, was found to have a heart murmur which apparently was one of those murmurs that do not affect the heart or the health in any way. From then on he stopped all of his physical activities, dieted rigorously, became extremely nervous, suffered with insomnia, and was practically an invalid for three years. Then he went to another doctor who recognized the type of murmur he told him he did not have organic heart disease, had him go back to his work and gradually increase his exercises. But it took three more years before he got back his previous health.

Case 2. A widow, aged 50, who was living in her country home—near her city home—used to wake up in the night with great perturbation of the heart. Physical examination showed nothing except an occasional premature beat. Her history brought out the fact that her husband, who had a organic heart trouble, had died the night at this country home and she had been unable to see a doctor. When it was pointed out to her that she never had these seizures except when she was at her country home, and that they were caused by her state of mind and worry over the possibility of not securing a doctor's time, she had no further trouble.

Heart disturbances that are caused purely by psychic factors—emotional reactions—are known to produce practically all the symptoms of true heart disease. The effect of anxiety is so great, both in the real diseases of the heart and these neuroses, that Dr. Connor cautions physicians on handling of these patients—cautious parents who have children suffering from real heart disease not to be constantly reminding them of it.

The treatment of these neuroses of the heart is solely through psychotherapy—mind therapy. The physician has to be very careful not to have the patient think that he believes his symptoms are imaginary, for he resents that. They are not imaginary, but brought about by agencies outside the heart—through the nervous system—and are curable. The patients must be encouraged to gradually increase their exercise and to live a normal life. Naturally, excessive use of stimulants or tea, coffee and alcohol, must be avoided, and in some cases must be tabooed entirely on account of the general effect on nervous system and general health.

Tomorrow—Gas.

Living and Loving

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

Take two young people in love, marry them and set them up in a little house or flat to keep house. They can be as happy as it is possible for human beings to be in this world.

They may work hard, but what is work when it is done for those they dearly love?

But enter the Green Eyed Monster, Jealousy, and love flies out of the window quicker—oh, much quicker—than when poverty comes in at the door.

"DEAR VIRGINIA LEE: I read your letters every night. I enjoy them. You certainly give good advice to every one. Now I need your help. Won't you please help me? My husband is 24 and I am 19. We have been married a year. I have been married before, but he knew it before he married me. Now he is always talking about it.

"My first husband lives in the same part of town we do. Every time I go to town my husband will say, 'Who did you see in town?' He means, did I see the other one.

"He has no right to be jealous. He just worries me to death talking about him. He won't go to church with me. He has a fit if I go alone. I stay at home to keep peace. He won't let me have girl friends come to see me. He just nags all the time. I give up all my friends for him. Still he isn't satisfied. Please tell me what to do. I am almost crazy.

"WORRIED ADALINE."

Just a selfish kid. That's what your husband is. Adaline. You might just as well take a firm stand first as last. Therefore, assure him that you love him and are true, then go as you wish, and Get wisdom, get understanding, forget it not; neither decline the words of my mouth.

Forsake her not, and she will preserve thee; love her, and she shall keep thee.—Proverbs IV, 5

Peter's Adventures

By MRS. FLORENCE SMITH VINCENT

"IT'S A WISE MOTHER—" "WHERE" will you be when the little black beetles scratch their way out of the cold ground." Peter was curious to know how Tumble-Bug mothers behaved.

"Goodness knows," answered Auntie, cheerfully. "It's a wise mother Tumble-Bug who knows her own babies, and probably I could meet mine face to face half a dozen times and never guess who they were. That's nothing to worry about, though. When the youngsters come above ground they will be able to look after themselves, which is just as it should be. A Tumble-Bug mother has done her duty when she has laid her eggs and tucked them away for safe-keeping. After that she is free to do as she likes. Things will get along very well without her. I am all tucked out by my day's work, niece. What do you say, shall we take a vacation, you and I? Husband tells me there's a fine little beetle bungalow to rent in a bush by the brook. It's fine and cool, he says, and from the front porch there's a splendid view."

"What do you need a view for when Peter wanted to find out something he knew no better way of finding so than asking questions. Auntie Tumble-Bug was pleased by interest.

"Then you had better open your eyes and run up your ears and ready to take to your heels, to see a stranger!"

If Biffer had shot at his cousin they would not have been surprised.

"Stranger, where?" shrilled three as with one voice. The Tumble-Bugs looked in the direction Biffer was pointing. Their voices dropped to a whisper. "Biffer's right; but how did fellow manage to sneak up upon Simpsie he had been an enemy. Biffer laughed impudently. "Two would have served you for boasting."

SPORT SNAP SHOTS

FRAMED
by Phil

According to another letter received by this column from G. Custer, Colorado Springs, Col., former Xenian, the playing of Earl Harry Clark, known to his hundreds of admirers as just plain "Dutch," in the recent East-West football game at San Francisco, while not sensational, was up to all expectations. Custer is a personal friend of "Dutch" than whom there are few better backfield men in his opinion.

It seems Dutch, captain of the Colorado College eleven, was on the wrong team as the East won a convincing victory and "Dutch" did not have many opportunities to get away for long gains. Let Custer tell about it:

"Well, Phil, our own 'Dutch' did not get away to any long gains which we were hoping for in the East-West game but excepting a fumble on the kickoff he certainly played a wonderful game, according to radio and newspaper accounts."

"Dutch" says that Cannon surely ruined his chances for providing several little thrills as the Notre Dame all-American lineman was always in his path. Cannon played no favorites either as he downed every ball carrier he got his hands on. You can see by his report, which I enclose, that Clark is hard to get to talk about himself. He is certainly a fine, big fellow, an idol of young and old here.

"He flew to Salt Lake City, rode on the train from there to Pueblo and continued by plane to Colorado Springs so as to be on hand for the game of basketball between Colorado College and the Kansas Aggies. He played the Saturday game but not having had a basketball in his hands for three weeks he was not in his best form. Anyway he kept his best form in the running until the last few minutes of the game."

"The team plays in City Auditorium, where the playing court is the full size—100 feet by fifty—some space to cover from one basket to the other and great dribbling."

"Boys here enjoyed my recent letter in the Gazette. 'Dutch' deserves every good word said about him. I am recommending him to Wilmington College for the coaching vacancy there but I think he is going to stay in the West. He can handle players as he really coaches the football and basketball teams here. I look for C. C. to keep him as assistant to Van DeGraff."

"I am feeling fine and enjoying the so far wonderful weather. My best regards to my Xenian friends."

In the opinion of Douglass W. Miller, authority on Buckeye Conference football and basketball, blocking promises to be an outstanding feature of play in basketball this season. He predicts that this year basketball followers will find it to be a really important factor in the college game and that the Buckeye Conference will prove no exception to this rule for at least half of the teams will make some use of blocking plays. He points out that this device in the defensive play has been developing for the last two years and was used successfully last season by many of the stronger teams. Miller explains the workings of the device this way:

"The purpose of blocking in basketball is similar to its function in football. In both games, the blocker is used to protect a team-mate until the latter can execute the intended play. The blocker in basketball merely places himself between the man he is protecting and the opponent whom he wishes to keep out of the play with the result that the defensive players cannot reach the protected man without charging the blocker. In the out and tumble of the game, however, blocking sometimes actually results in body checking and making the defensive player out by pulling him on the floor."

"With the increased use of blocking promised this season, it seems likely that the rule makers of the game will be forced to give further consideration to the value of this type of play. In favor of blocking it may be said that its successful use requires a high development of team play and increases the value of the fast, shifty type of player who can break him or men seeking to block him or who can in turn move rapidly enough to keep his opponents out of the play. Blocking tends, however, to increase the handicaps of the small player and to make basketball a more rough and tumble game."

"Blocking makes the work of officials harder, too, and makes their decisions an even more important factor in deciding the results of games. Under current interpretations of the rules, the referee must decide in cases of contact resulting from effort to block whether responsibility rests with the blocker or the defensive player."

ANTIOCH TO PLAY CAPITAL VARSITY

Antioch College's Division "B" basketball quintet will make its seasonal debut in a return game with Capital University at Loyd gymnasium at Columbus Saturday night, starting at 8:15 o'clock. Earlier in the season the Lutherans defeated Antioch's Division "A" team, 31 to 18, but better results are expected from the Division "B" outfit. The "A" Division team, which played three games before the Christmas recess, lost its last game.

LAST QUARTER SPURT DEFEATS SIDNEY IN FIRST LEAGUE GAME

With Two Regulars Retired On Personals, Buccaneers Start Scoring Rally That Brings Victory; Bell And Hurley Sparkle.

By PHIL FRAME
VERCOMING a discouraging start, a spirited uphill fight enabled Xenia Central High's basketball team, defending champions, to wrest a 23 to 21 victory from Sidney High School in its opening game of the 1930 Miami Valley League race Friday night on the Sidney floor.

Playing the entire fourth quarter without the services of Smittle and Price, regular guards, who were ruled out on personal fouls, the Bucs exhibited a burst of scoring power in the final period and a basket by Birch Bell, who sank the two-pointer from almost mid-floor in the last thirty seconds of play, brought about a close victory.

It was that "never say die" spirit, coupled with as sensational a second-half comeback as any Xenia cage team ever made, that permitted the Bucs to get off to a flying start in defense of the league title they have retained for two straight years.

The outlook was black for the blue and white in the first half as Sidney jumped into an early lead, held an 8 to 4 advantage at the end of the quarter and increased its margin to 16 to 9 at half-time.

Outscoring the home quintet, 7 to 4 in the third period, Xenia reduced Sidney's lead to 20 to 16 at the conclusion of the third quarter. Immediately after the final period began the Bucs were placed at what appeared to be a tremendous disadvantage when Smittle and Price were eliminated on four personal fouls each.

It was therefore a high compliment to the fighting spirit of Coach Wilson's forces that the Bucs refused to quit but on the contrary unleashed an offensive drive that resulted in a thrilling victory, Sidney was held to one point while Xenia was scoring seven in the fourth quarter.

Sidney assumed a three-point lead at the start of the game when Kritzer made a penalty shot and then sank a fielder. Hurley registered a basket for Xenia, Kaser added a foul and Hurley and Smittle made free throws. Douglas and Kaser rang up baskets in quick succession as the period closed.

The second period was a repetition of the first with Xenia seemingly unable to hit its true stride. Smith increased Sidney's lead to five points with a foul shot, but Smittle hit the net. Bell contributed a free throw and Hurley weighed in with a basket. Three consecutive free throws by Kaser were the signal for a Sidney rally and Douglas and Kritzer crashed through with baskets to boost their teams lead to seven points when the intermission rolled around.

Opening the last half, Xenia spurted to the extent of six straight points when Bell made a double foul, equivalent to a basket and Schlei and Smittle added fielders. Smith made a charity shot and then a fielder, Douglas added a free throw and Schlei did likewise, making the count 20 to 16 when the third period closed.

With Smittle and Price out on personal fouls, Thompson went to one guard post, Bell was shifted forward to the other guard station and Schlei went to forward. With this make-shift combination, the Bucs proceeded to win out.

Bell made a basket as did Hurley and Schlei added a foul. Stephan shot a foul for Sidney, leaving the teams deadlocked, 21 to 21. As the second period closed, the time began to grow short. Bell rang a long shot from near the center of the floor. It split the net with twenty seconds left to play and it was all over, including the shouting.

Bell and Hurley, each with seven points, shared high scoring honors for the Bucs while Smittle collected five and Schlei, four. Injected into the game in the last quarter, Schlei and Thompson substituted played to perfection. Schlei played a fine floor game and the guarding of Thompson was airtight. And it must not be forgotten that Bell, Hurley, Smittle, Price and Michael also gave great exhibitions. For Sidney Kaser, who tallied six points, and Kritzer, center, gave the Bucs plenty of trouble. Hurley controlled the tip-off most of the time.

The victory enabled Xenia to maintain its reign of superiority over league teams. Exclaiming an unusual domination over league opponents, Xenia has not been defeated in basketball by a Miami Valley League opponent for three years.

Xenia has hurdled its first obstacle in the path to a third straight league championship but the four remaining league teams to be played will provide stiff opposition.

Xenia also made good seven out of ten shots from the foul line, a remarkable improvement over the recent Norwood game, while Sidney also displayed unenviable ability from the seventeen-foot mark, caging nine out of fourteen chances.

Douglas, Sidney guard, also went out on personals in the last quarter, tallying ten points. Cope played a good floor game for the losers and made two points.

The Spring Hill monopoly was broken in the third contest when McKinley 6B easily defeated Spring Hill sixth graders, 21 to 10. Randall was high scorer of the game with thirteen points. Dorman played a good floor game for the losers.

In the preliminary game at Sidney, the Xenia reserves made an impressive debut by trouncing Sidney seconds by the one-sided margin of 28 to 4. Shaffer, forward, scored ten points for the "Little Bucs." Lineups and summary:

Forest Hurley and other members of Cliff Perrine's recording orchestra, with which he is associated, were roused from their beds and forced to hurriedly vacate their rooms when fire broke out at 2 a. m. Saturday on an upper floor of a hotel where the band is staying in Xenia, according to word received by his mother, Mrs. Agnes M. Hurley, 165 Hill St. Hurley and a majority of other members of the orchestra had time to gather their personal belongings together and save them from the flames. The extent of the damage caused by the fire was not determined.

Bowling Scores.

The Downtown Country Club bowling team, leader of the City League, stretched its advantage to seven full games by winning two out of three games from the Hooven and Allison Co. while the second-place Fuller and Sons quintet dropped the odd game in three to the Flexmode Shoes in a double-header Friday night. Frame led the Downtowners with 551, Hult topped the H. and A. with 513, P. Fuller was best for Fullers with 479 and Dudley led the Flexmode Shoes with 476. Box scores:

MIAMISBURG WINS FROM GREENVILLE

Winners Take Lead In First Half

Taking an early lead and maintaining it throughout the contest, Miamisburg High School's basketball team opened its Miami Valley League season with a 23 to 18 victory over Greenville High on the Burger floor Friday night.

Miamisburg held an advantage of 10 to 7 at the half. Capper, burger center, was high scorer for his team with six points while Stemle, center, with seven points, topped the Greenville scoring summary.

In a preliminary game the Miamisburg reserves defeated the Greenville seconds, 17 to 10. Lineups:

M'KINLEY, SPRING HILL GRADES WIN

Spring Hill fourth and fifth grades and McKinley 6B were victorious in the second round of the Intra-City Grade School Basketball League at Central High gymnasium Saturday morning. McKinley 4A, 5A and 6A teams were idle this round.

In the first game of the round, Spring Hill fourth graders blanked McKinley 4B, 10 to 0. Myers accounted for eight of the points made. Acton was McKinley's mainstay.

Spring Hill fifth graders beat McKinley 5B, 19 to 4 in the second game. Spring Hill presented a fast-breaking offense with Leach, center, tallying ten points. Cope played a good floor game for the losers and made two points.

The Spring Hill monopoly was broken in the third contest when McKinley 6B easily defeated Spring Hill sixth graders, 21 to 10. Randall was high scorer of the game with thirteen points. Dorman played a good floor game for the losers.

In the preliminary game at Sidney, the Xenia reserves made an impressive debut by trouncing Sidney seconds by the one-sided margin of 28 to 4. Shaffer, forward, scored ten points for the "Little Bucs." Lineups and summary:

EAST HIGH DEFEATS WILBERFORCE FIVE IN LEAGUE CONTEST

Narrow Victory Is Inaugural Result At School Gym

East High School made its debut in the new eight-team basketball league it has joined by defeating the Wilberforce Hi-Y quintet, 20 to 19 in an exciting game at the East gymnasium Friday night.

Scoring nine points, Pettiford, captain and guard on the East team, was largely responsible for the victory. Evans led the Wilberforce scoring with nine markers.

East will play its second league game at Urbana Saturday night, meeting the Urbana Hi-Y team. Lineups:

VALLEY TEAMS TAKE DOUBLE VICTORY ON BEAVER HIGH FLOOR

Boys Win Handily But Girls' Victory Is Narrow

Spring Valley High School boys' and girls' basketball teams were both victorious over Beaver Creek High School teams in a double-header on the Beaver floor Friday night. Spring Valley boys won their game, 32 to 18 but the girls barely beat Beaver lasses, 17 to 16.

In the boys' contest Spring Valley led at the half, 19 to 8. Crites scored twelve points for the winners and Stewart contributed thirteen for the losers.

Thirteen-Year-Old Heir Shoots Housekeeper

Milton J. Budlong, Jr., thirteen-year-old son of Milton J. Budlong, millionaire, of Newport, R. I., accidentally shot and killed his father's housekeeper, Miss Margaret A. Ahearn, 40 years old, on New Year's Day. The boy had been practicing with a .22 caliber repeating rifle which he had received as a Christmas gift, and playfully pointed the weapon at the woman.

PATTERSON MOVIES OF ANIMALS TO BE SEEN NEXT TUESDAY

Motion pictures taken by Frederick B. Patterson, president of the National Cash Register Co., during five months of hunting adventures in British East Africa, will be shown at Spring Valley Township Hall, Tuesday, January 14 at 8 p. m. under the sponsorship of the Parent-Teacher Club.

These pictures are said to be among the finest ever taken of wild animals in their native haunts. There are numerous close up views of lions, buffalo, rhinos, etc. As a concluding feature of the story a massive elephant walks out of the forest facing the camera as he approaches, with ears outstretched like some great ship under full sail. One feature shows twenty-six lions at play, the greatest number ever photographed at one time.

During his hunting trip, Mr. Patterson took more than 18,000 feet of motion pictures. They were assembled and reduced to just enough length to make an intense gripping motion picture narrative. They have been seen thus far by more than 200,000 persons. Instead of attempting to capitalize these films, Mr. Patterson generously has contributed them to forward the cause of more intimate knowledge of wild animal life in British East Africa. No charge ever has been or will be made for seeing these pictures.

STACY L. COPSEY CALLED BY DEATH

Following an operation to which he submitted at Miami Valley Hospital, Dayton, Thursday morning, Stacy Leroy Copsey, 53, died at 3:30 o'clock, Friday afternoon. He had been ill for the last six weeks.

Mr. Copsey was born May 26, 1876. He had been superintendent at the Southwestern Cement Co. at Osborn for the past four years. He was a member of the M. P. Church at Port William and the Obident Council No. 160, D. of A., Xenia.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Hattie May Huff Copsey, one brother, H. A. Copsey, Paintersville and a sister, Mrs. Alva Ary of Xenia. Funeral services will be held at the First M. E. Church, Monday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock with the Rev. W. N. Shank, pastor of the church, in charge. Burial will be made at Port William. Friends may call at the residence, 838 N. Gallows St., Sunday afternoon and evening.

RAIL DECISION IN LOGAN GAS COMPANY

LORAIN, O., Jan. 11.—The recent decision of the Ohio Supreme court upholding the state utilities commission valuation on the property of the Logan Gas Co., was hailed here as a victory for cities affected by demands of the company for increased rates.

The supreme court upheld the commission in every respect except one, and thus one may boost the valuation $1,800,000. Should the valuation be increased, however, by this sum, it still will be some $9,000,000 lower than set by the Logan Gas Co., itself.

FOR THE LOVE OF PAT

BY C. L. WEBB © 1929

READ THIS FIRST:

Patricia Blair, Red Cross driver and heifer, partially identifies an injured flyer as her twin brother, James K. Blair, and takes him to the base hospital at C— suffering, apparently, from aphasia. At the hospital another aphasia victim, known only as Jimmy, is also listed. He was brought to the hospital wearing a German uniform, after carrying Lieutenant Rex Dallard, wounded Canadian, from a shell hole in No Man's Land. The lieutenant claims the young man is an American aviator. Doctors express the opinion that the youth may be a spy. This is hotly refuted by Nurse Margery Lynne. The lieutenant, captivated by Patricia, believes a plot is afoot to defraud the girl of her fortune, with Margery Lynne as the twin brother. He and Nurse Lynne concur in their beliefs.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER VI

"But you can't get away from facts," went on the lieutenant in a musing tone. "Facts are facts, and they're mighty stubborn things, and these happenings aren't all—". There's no question as to Pat, herself," interrupted Margery Lynne. "I saw her picture once in the photo-gravure section of a Sunday newspaper, and I recognized her the instant I set eyes on her in the big receiving hospital at Paris. I've been here three weeks, and she has made three trips in that time. I know she hated terribly to leave her mother, but she had no alternative. Human feelings are the last consideration in war times. But just think, lieutenant, they will come into complete control of all that wealth, twenty million dollars, on the first of the coming January!"

If they are alive," supplemented the lieutenant, with a slight emphasis on the qualifying conjunction. The following morning, when Nurse Lynne entered the room where Dallard was recuperating, she brought surprising news. The flyer, Blair, had recovered his mental balance, insofar as being rational in speech and actions. But he could not remember his name, nor anything of his former life. That was still all a blank.

In the afternoon the lieutenant received yet another item of interesting information about the mysterious birdman. The latter, at his own request, was to be transferred at once to Paris. He had read the letters his twin sister had so thoughtfully returned to his pocket, and decided that Paris was the place for him.

Came still another jolt for the lieutenant. His young friend, Jim, together with three others, all psychopathic cases, were to be transferred to Paris in the same ambulance with Blair. Dallard received this information with conflicting feelings. He dreaded to think that he might never see Jim again. But then, too, it might be the unfortunate move for the boy.

On the day that marked the departure for Paris of the big army ambulance carrying the flyer known as James Blair, the young man known only as Jim, and the three psychopathic cases, Dr. Frank Gordon, with a man driving the ambulance this time, arrived at the field hospital bearing news of a stirring nature.

Three nights before, the doctor said, Pat Blair and he had attended a play at a popular theater in Paris. Pat had worn a wine colored evening gown, and over it a hand some fur coat. Returning from the play they had dropped into a restaurant, had a little supper, and came out intending to take a taxi for the hospital, where each of them had a room.

How the thing had happened, or what the motive was behind the deed, Dr. Gordon was utterly at loss to understand. All he could tell was that he had beckoned to a taxi driver and was waiting at the curb, supposing Pat to be immediately behind him.

Suddenly, he stated, he heard a muffled scream and, turning his head, saw Pat's face for just a fleeting second in the open doorway of a black limousine. Then she was jerked inside, the door slammed shut, and the car sped away. By the time he had managed to make the taxi driver understand what had happened the limousine was out of sight. He had straightway informed the police of course, but up to that time he had no word of Pat had been received. She was just another among the many missing.

"I am going to Paris!" announced Lieutenant Rex Dallard, at the conclusion of Dr. Gordon's astounding tale. "I may have to use a crutch for a few days, but that won't prevent me from doing a little scouting around. And besides, I am anxious to get in touch with my young friend, Jim, and see that he gets a chance for his 'white alley'!"

And that was how it came that Lieutenant Dallard, with Margery Lynne to care for him, rode to Paris with Dr. Gordon on his return trip. The lieutenant was still undergoing surgical treatment, his wounds having to be dressed at least once a day. It was the hospital, therefore, for him, as well as for Dr. Gordon and the nurse.

In response to his inquiry regarding his young friend, Jim, he was informed that an aphasia case answering that description had arrived only an hour before and had been assigned to Bed 24 in Ward 6.

This was pleasing information for the lieutenant. For when he found his opportunity an hour later, to visit the young man, having obtained a crutch and hobbled through a labyrinth of corridors to Ward 6, thence down to Bed No. 24, he found Margery already there and installed as Jim's nurse. "You're a fast worker," observed the lieutenant, with a cheerful grin. She admitted that it might be true.

But Lieutenant Dallard's face wore no grin, as he looked down at the pathetic figure of the bed, the victim of the shell, the young man whose braveness and strength of body, only a week before, had enabled him to perform a seldom equaled act of heroism. And now the brain no longer functioned correctly. Something, somewhere, some tiny part of the intricate mechanism, had been jolted loose by the jar of that exploded shell. Unless science, in the form of surgery, could delve in and adjust that bit of deranged mechanism, this unfortunate youth might never again know even his own name.

And it was this thought, this possibility, that stirred again the question in Lieutenant Dallard's mind as to whether there might be any connection between this boy and his twin sister, Pat, and the kidnapped ambulance driver, Pat, who, with her twin brother, Jim, was to come into control of twenty million dollars on the first of the coming January.

Surely, mused the lieutenant, there could not be two parallel cases, each so exactly like the other. That taxed the credulity even more than the possibility of a coincidence. And there was the strange behavior of the flyer who had recovered—in part—his mental equilibrium.

Viewing the situation from its various angles, it certainly carried the ear-marked of a connected plot into which some unlooked-for circumstance had accidentally bumped.

On every side one caught a glimpse of the hint of ugly mystery. For it was folly to accept the bold kidnapping of the girl, Pat, as anything other than the work of plot-ter who were fixing to separate her from the twenty million dollars, report said she and her twin brother were to receive.

"It can't be that Dr. Gordon knows anything about this girl, Pat, being an heiress, or he would have mentioned it when he told of the kidnapping," said Dallard, suddenly, expressing his thoughts aloud.

Margery Lynne looked up, surprised at the unexpected declaration of the lieutenant's wide-spread fancy.

"No," she said, "I don't think—in fact, I'm quite sure he knows nothing about her private affairs. Pat rarely spoke about herself, even to her more intimate acquaintances. And Dr. Gordon is no one of the inquisitive breed of medics."

"Of course," observed the lieutenant, gazing at her reflectively. "You haven't, as yet, had any opportunity of hearing what the doctors and nurses here have to say about the kidnapping!"

Pretty Margery Lynne permitted herself the luxury of an amused smile.

"And it was you, lieutenant," she said softly, "who accredited me, only a few moments ago, with being a fast worker. I'm disappointed in you."

"Well?" he queried, grinning. "Was I right or wrong?"

"Both," she tossed back on the bounce. "Right in your first reading, and wrong in your last. For, believe me, lieutenant, regarding reasons for kidnapping, why girls leave their escorts to ride away with handsome strangers, I certainly got an earful tonight. And poor Dr. Gordon! Surely his ears must have burned the last two days! Listen, soldier man!"

The Theater

Winchell Smith, playwright, is dangerously ill at his home in Farmington, Conn., and specialists have been summoned to his bedside. Dr. J. A. V. Davies, Farmington, the fifth family physician, is in charge of the case. Smith recently returned from European health resorts where he journeyed after treatment at Johns Hopkins, Baltimore, Md. The celebrated long-shot of the picture, "Civilian Clothes." This is a play of old penned by Thompson Buchanan, the writer who married Joan Lowell before she wrote "Cradle of the Deep," and is now getting his freedom from her since the book splashed over the literary top.

Color pictures are all right to look at, but they are hard on some of the players. Consider Frank Fay. Fay had his red hair dyed black for a Texas picture. Then he had to have the color washed out for another picture. His next assignment was another film laid in Texas in which he again had to disguise his carrot top with black dye. Now Frank's hair is said to be turning gray.

Twenty Years '10- Ago -'30

A company, known as the Binder Amusement Co., has been incorporated. Mr. Henry L. Binder, serving as president.

Mr. R. S. Kingsbury will sail from New York January 22 on the steamer "Moltke" for a month's cruise through the West Indies islands, South America and Panama.

A car of baled hay was destroyed by fire in the C. H. and D. Railroad yards.

John A. Nisbet was elected cashier of the Xenia National Bank at a board of directors' meeting Tuesday.

Joseph March put himself on the line with "The Wild Party" and "The Set Up" but it was only a matter of time before he was more than three months ago. March trailed into Hollywood to work for Metro-Goldwyn.

He reported at the studio but nobody knew who he was. Fear of stepping on some big mogul's toes, not knowing how he got there, simply refrained from kicking him out. He remained at M. G. M. drawing salary, until his one month contract had expired.

Then he left Howard Hughes to pick him up. Then March assumed a story industry by actually writing dialogue for "Hell's Angels" that was used in its entirety. Next he was loaned to "Journey's End" and now he has been loaned to Famous Play-to dialogue Gary Cooper's next picture.

FOODY POST PLANS INTERESTING PROGRAM OF 1930 ACTIVITIES

A year of greater activity for the American Legion in Greene County than has been experienced since the twelve month period immediately following the close of the war has been decided upon by members of Foody Post. A definite program for 1930, including all activities that have been carried out in previous years and several new events that will become annual features was mapped out and approved at the meeting held Tuesday night.

The complete program of local activities for 1930 includes:

A moving picture entertainment to be staged in the near future, with members of the committee that staged the 1929 successful event in charge. This committee is Paul Turnbull, Sheriff Olmer Tate and Paul Halder. Plans for this event will be announced in the near future.

A broadcasting program to be placed on the air from Station WSMK under auspices of the post and the Greene County Volunteer of the 40 at 8. Sanction of the Legion for this item of the program has been granted and plans for it will be carried out by the 40 at 8. Memorial Day program. Close co-operation of all Legion posts in the county as well as that of other patriotic organizations will be sought by the memorial day committee, personnel of which will be the same as in 1929: Loring Shepard, Raymond Horen, William Rickles, Albert Houk and Willard Bennington. Definite plans for the memorial day observance will be mapped out and announced by this committee in the near future.

A county picnic and "pup" tent party. This event is to be staged during the summer months with the entertainment committee of the Legion making arrangements and setting the date. The days of '17 and '18 will be lived over again for a week end by members of the Legion throughout the county, with "pup" tents at their nightly shelter and revellers, chow call and other well remembered parts of army routine during the big show as the attraction.

Co-operation of the post will be given toward a municipal Fourth of July celebration for Xenia this year, details of which have not yet been decided upon.

One of the high spots of the year's program will come on Armistice Day when as a part of the Legion observance the new armory will be dedicated. Although details of the armory dedication have not yet been decided upon it is planned that several speakers of national and state prominence will be invited to take part in the Legion ceremony.

In addition to these main features of the 1930 program already decided upon the post during 1930 will co-operate with the Auxiliary in several social events which are being considered and will also give active support to the auxiliary business program.

Movie Monotypes

LOIS MORAN

Is Pittsburgh's "local girl makes good."

Knows that "And so overnight FAME" can be something besides a subtitle. Made her screen debut in "Stella Dallas" and was immediately placed under long term contract by Samuel Goldwyn.

Received her education abroad. Not supervised by Thomas Cook or Raymond Whitcomb.

Is an actress because her mother never was and wanted to be.

Years for Doughnut Dispensary

Doesn't care where she lives as long as she can act, sing and dance. Thinks Paris the grandest place in the world to study. New York, the most inspiring and confusing; London, the homeliest; Hollywood, the most care-free, and Vienna, the dream city.

Intends to own a combination book-shop and bakery before she dies.

Is extremely interested in philosophy; fearfully ambitious. Admires Goethe, Voltaire, Mussolini, and Bernard Shaw; thinks of Duse and Maude Adams with reverence — and loves backless evening clothes and bathing suits.

Has Plenty of "Time"

Doesn't collect anything but books she has enjoyed reading and wrist watches she keeps breaking.

Got her part in "Stella Dallas" by sending a picture of herself as Juliet to Sam Goldwyn.

Doesn't think eating is any fun without being able to read. When alone, always sits in a big chair with a book and has her meals served on a tray. Romaine Rolland, F. Scott Fitzgerald, Frederick Nietzsche and Rupert Brooke are her favorite authors.

Has been promising herself for two years to take a three-weeks pack-trip in the mountains. The nearest she ever got to it is a location visit to Death Valley.

Can Scramble Eggs

Principle joys in life are: Acting in every size, shape or form, singing for her own amusement, but no one else's—cooking (devil's food cake, cream puffs and scrambled eggs are her specialties) — conversing "tete-a-tete" until four in the morning—sleeping with the moon shining in her face—floating in the ocean at six in the evening when the water and sky are the same shimmering grey-blue—and her most enchanting and satisfying "mater."

Wants ten children so that at least one of them can have some intelligence.

Come On, Revolution!

Thinks this country is progressing too smoothly and could stand some new revolutionary ideas.

Is a rabid Greta Garbo fan. Sees all of her pictures at least three times.

Abominates detective stories, being fitted, flitting on make-up, having finger waves and "Strange Interlude."

Doesn't think she is important. Which is the most important thing about her.

DEATH CLAIMS MRS. CHARLES THORNHILL

Mrs. Alice O. Thornhill, 71, wife of Charles N. Thornhill, died at her home, 428 W. Second St., Friday night at 9:30 o'clock following a long illness. She had been in failing health for the last two or three years. Mrs. Thornhill was born in Jackson County January 18, 1858 but had lived in this city for the last forty years. She married Mr. Thornhill December 25, 1881. She was a member of the First M. E. Church. She is survived by her husband, five brothers and two sisters. One daughter, Gertrude, died in 1886.

Funeral services will be held at the residence Monday afternoon at 1 o'clock. Burial will be made in Woodland Cemetery.

KEEP THE SABBATH

Believing there would be fewer hold-ups and robberies if more attention was paid to keeping the Sabbath, I am sending a few Scripture verses about the Sabbath.

We find Sabbath in Genesis 1-3, the fourth commandment—"Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy. Thou shalt not do any work," etc. They were not to gather manna on the Sabbath, Exodus 16: 27-30 and Exodus 31: 13-17 about keeping the Sabbath.

There should be more sermons preached about keeping the Sabbath.

Hope you will see fit to publish the foregoing in tomorrow's Gazette so it will be ready for the Sabbath.

FROZEN CABBAGE MAY BE SALVAGED

Cabbage frozen in a storage pit at Columbus during the Thanks. giving zero temperature was salvaged in an experiment conducted by H. D. Brown, associate in the department of horticulture of the Ohio Experiment Station.

This cabbage had been repeatedly frozen in the field before it was harvested and placed in pit storage on Nov. 18. It is well-known, Dr. Brown says, that well-hardened cabbage plants will withstand considerable freezing and it is a common practice to allow cabbage with stalks and roots attached, and intended for growing seed to freeze after it is covered with soil, but it is generally assumed that it is unsafe to allow harvested cabbage heads to freeze in pit storage.

In order to test different methods for saving the frozen cabbage one lot was placed on unfrozen soil and covered with straw and manure; two lots were placed in a warm greenhouse one left uncovered and the other covered with moist soil; one lot was thawed out in cold water; one lot was placed in cold storage at 34 degrees F. and allowed to thaw; and the sixth lot was cut up for kraut before it had a chance to thaw.

Curiously enough all lots thawed and provided marketable cabbage. Only heads that were roughly handled while frozen were unfit for market. The lot which thawed on the unfrozen ground, the one placed in cold storage and the one thawed in cold water were of the best quality. The two lots placed in the greenhouse were of poorer quality. The kraut made from the sixth lot was excellent.

All lots except the one in cold storage tended to heat. This emphasizes the importance of vent-
